Fast Freight Train Is Derailed; Trainmen Killed

Two Are Killed, Another May Be Fatally Injured

Eighteen Cars of Fast Freight Train Are Derailed.

ENGINE BLOWS UP

Hurls Men About One Hundred Feet In Air, Says Report.

SPRINGFIELD, Tenn., March 18.—(AP)—Two trainmen were killed and another probably fatally injured in a wreck near here today of a through freight train of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, bound from Nashville to Evansville, Ind.

H. L. Russell, fireman, and Aaron Moss, brakeman, both of Evansville were killed and Joe Crandall, engineer, also of Evansville, was probably fatally hurt.

D. H. Dobbins, ticket agent at Springfield, said in a report here that the engine exploded and hurled the three men nearly one hundred feet in the air.

Eighteen cars of the train were derailed. The wreck occurred on the main line of the Henderson division, but it was expected that the tracks would be cleared of the wreckage within a few hours, and the trains would be clear so no interference of moving trains would occur.

Crandall was taken to a Nashville hospital immediately after the wreck where it was said that he was in a very serious condition, and will probably die. He was burned almost entirely over the body. Mr. Crandall was forty-five years old.

Reward for Negro Fugitive Offered

Accused of Wounding Mississippi County Officer.

OSCEOLA, March 8.—Sheriff W. W. Shaver of Mississippi county today offered a reward of $150 for apprehension of Sam Johnson, negro, who is alleged to have shot Deputy Sheriff Jake Thrallkill of Wilson, wounding him probably fatally, when he, with other officers, went to Moore and McFerrin plantation, north of Osceola Saturday night to arrest the negro on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Johnson is described as of medium build, ginger color, aged about 30, having one bad eye. He fled from the window of his cabin, escaped through the back door while officers were giving their attention to the wounded deputy.

Thrallkill, who was rushed to the Baptist hospital in Memphis Saturday night, was reported in a critical condition today.

The negro, a share cropper on the plantation, following a dispute with J. C. Ellison, manager of the plantation, was reported to be armed and waiting for Mr. Ellison on his return from Osceola. Ellison was warned by telephone and returned to the plantation with the officers.

Baking Success a Matter of Care, Says Mrs. Leona Ihrig

Bread Is Discussed by Cooking School Conductor Here March 31

"There is more magic in the oven than in any other kitchen article," declares Mrs. Leona Rusk Ihrig, nationally famous home economist, who will conduct The Star's Cooking School at the Saenger Theatre, which opens Monday, March 31, and continues for five consecutive lectures.

"In baking, the element of time must be double-checked. A matter of minutes may mean the difference between a culinary masterpiece and rank undigested indigestion. Fortunately the woman whose baking hours can be arranged free from interruption, may a phone call have heralded the cremation into cinders, of what might otherwise have been beautiful cakes or biscuits.

"In the larger bakeries of today, the bread, on moving trays, travels

Three Indicted For First Degree Murder, Eldorado

Woman Being Held In Jail In Connection With Poisoning Plot.

TWO MEN INDICTED

One Victim of Midnight War Succumbs To Wounds.

EL DORADO, March 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Bertie Gentry was indicted for first degree murder by the Union county grand jury today in connection with the death of her husband, James Gentry, whom she was accused of poisoning several weeks ago.

Mrs. Gentry, together with her aged father and mother were arrested following Gentry's death. Her parents were later released.

The first reports of Gentry's death said he died following a severe cold, but neighbors became suspicious and accused authorities to conduct an investigation. A state chemist was called from Little Rock who reported that he found traces of poison in Gentry's stomach.

County officers charged Mrs. Gentry of poisoning her husband to collect an insurance policy. She is being held in jail here.

Texas Threat Hits Radish Producers; Quality Required

Local Radishes White, But Market Wants Red Sparklers, Says Lowthorp.

TO GRADE STRICTLY

No Splits or Yellow Leaves Have Chance This Year Warning

A critical situation faces the radish growers in the Hope district, which can be solved only by the strictest grading of bunches offered for sale through the local commission houses, according to C. S. Lowthorp, of C. S. Lowthorp & Co.

The Hempstead county growers outside of the Blevins district have held onto the White Tips variety one season to long, Mr. Lowthorp says. All the demand in the Northern markets is for the Red Sparklers variety. This has been grown for several years by the Blevins producers, but central Hempstead county has held fast to the White Tips, according to Mr. Lowthorp.

"This year we are faced with dangerous competition from Texas, and all we can do is to sell our White Tips in a market calling for Red Sparklers, simply by offering a superior quality of radish and standardizing both bunches and radishes," Mr. Lowthorp told The Star today.

"Our White Tips must be extra nice—or they won't even pay for the freight to market," he said.

"Our Hope radishes are coming up with two pronounced defects—splits and yellow leaves. We must grade these out and leave them at home," he said.

"The trade is demanding uniform-sized bunches and uniform-sized radishes in each bunch. Radishes should run 12 to 15 to the bunch, and should be of the diameter of a quarter. Growers must eliminate small radishes and big jumbos. About 90 to the basket makes a good standard size."

Ed Doheny Breaks Down In Oil Trial

Government, for First Time, Gets Facts Before Jury.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(AP)—For the first time in a series of oil cases, the government today got before the jury the facts that the award of Elks Naval Oil reserves, released to a Doheny company, which had been termed by courts in civil cases as fraud on the part of Edward L. Doheny on trial for bribery of Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior.

Doheny himself opened the door of admission in testimony by reciting under a grilling cross examination by Owen J. Roberts, special government prosecutor, by showing how he accepted a security to what the government charges as a $100,000 bribe to Albert B. Fall. The witness said that in 1924 Fall sent him a share in his cattle company for security in what he termed as a loan.

Doheny broke down when the testimony came to the point when his son, Edward L. Doheny, was killed almost a year ago by his secretary.

Trial of B. J. Nichols of Sedalia, Mo., on similar charges will be heard Tuesday in Lawrence circuit court.

The state alleged Nichols and Fashing entered Kirby's lunch room and handed him a note demanding $100 each and containing instructions for delivery of the money. The next morning Kirby was found dead in his bed with a bullet wound in the heart and a pistol by his side.

A grand jury investigation revealed the alleged delivery of the note and the indictments on blackmail charges followed.

The high esteem in which Judge McCollum was held, together with the prominence of his judicial office, made the appointment of his successor the most interesting public topic in the Eighth district. Head, Judge John N. Cook, Judge Fredell, Judge Gus Peck and Will Steel. The meeting was attended from this city by Prosecuting Attorney Steve Carrigan.

The Circuit Judge

IT WAS our good fortune to become acquainted with the late James H. McCollum while he was still active as judge of the circuit court, and to his peerless reputation for honesty and courage we can add that he was one of those rare men in whom a chance meeting is an accurate index to character as a life-long acquaintanceship.

He was rugged and plain-spoken. The community in which he lived for sixty-eight years bestowed upon him continuous honors and public trusts. He was such a man that a generation of public life heightened people's respect for him, and levied none of those penalties which public service frequently exacts from the harried, fruitless efforts of lesser men.

The death of the judge in office only a few months before the Democratic primary, makes way for the appointment of his successor by the governor.

It is needless to say that the very nature of the judiciary limits the field of candidates from whom the governor may safely choose the next judge of the Eighth district. The life and public career of James McCollum set a worthy example. And the careers of all judges, taken in the aggregate, support the tradition that only men of exceptional clarity of thought and who have led blameless lives, are admissible to an office so peculiarly important under the political plan of our free republic.

Perhaps the finest thing among lawyers is their universal respect for the sacredness of the procedure by which a judge is selected. That is sometimes hard to maintain; in a free nation where politics makes for factionalism. But it must be maintained for the success of democratic government; and in their deliberations over the qualifications of a candidate for judge, the lawyers are usually a most valuable and courageous buffer between practical politics and constitutional government.

For the Texas Boosters

THE state of Texas has had a good many claims to distinction. For many years it was famous for its enormous herds of picturesque longhorn steers. More recently its oil fields have been the marvel of the continent. And now it is taking front rank as a cotton-producing section, with indications that its present high record will soon be eclipsed.

Texas, as a matter of fact, now produces about 5,000,000 bales of cotton annually; more than one-third of the nation's total cotton production, and more than any other foreign country produces.

It is interesting, in this connection, to note the way in which timehonored methods of producing cotton have been abandoned in Texas. Neither cultivation or harvesting is any longer dependent on hand work. One Texas farmer has raised and harvested 1700 bales from 2000 acres with the help of only five other workers—whereas, under old methods, full 100 men would have been used in planting and cultivating such a crop, and 200 more for hand picking it.

The cotton region of Texas, which spills over into Oklahoma, is ideally adapted for the new methods of handling cotton. The country is level, so that machine cultivators and pickers can be used, and it requires no fertilizer. Yields compare favorably with other cotton-growing regions, and the cost per bale is less.

All of this, summarized in the March Industrial Bulletin, published by Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., has led certain eastern economists to wonder if the Texas-Oklahoma region may not eventually get a practical monopoly on the cotton-growing industry in the United States.

Such a suggestion will undoubtedly meet with strong dissent in many quarters. At any rate, Texas seems to be heading into a bright future. The Texas booster has every reason to brag.

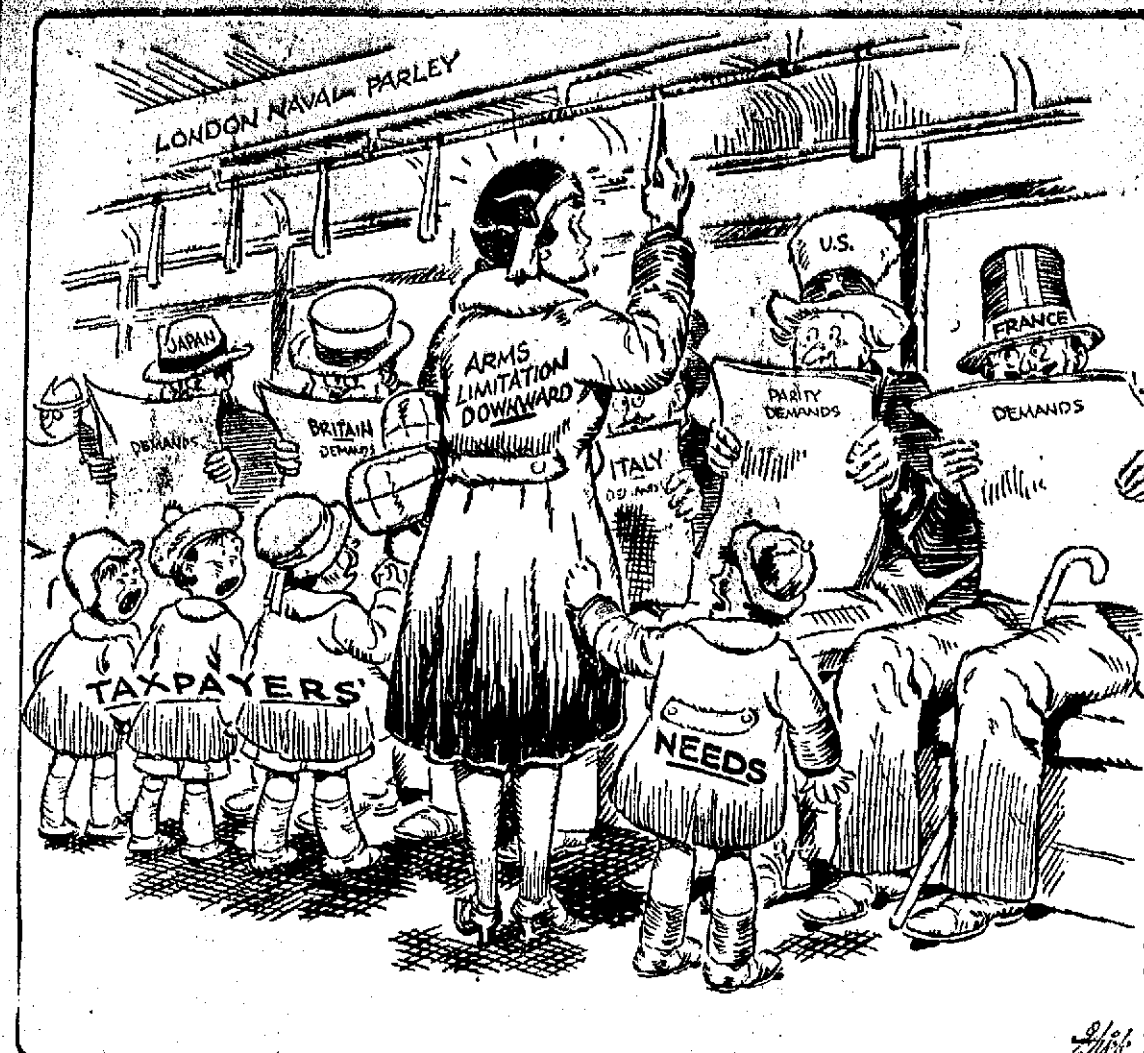

Adventure

THE little, two and three paragraph news items about air mail pilots that find their way into the papers occasionally make it perfectly clear why aviation is such a lure to restless, adventure-seeking young men.

A few days ago a dispatch told how a mail pilot saved his life in southern Michigan. He was flying through a blinding snow storm, at night, with no chance to make a safe landing. A parachute jump, at last, became inevitable. He loosened his safety belt, preparatory to jumping—and promptly fell out of the plane. He had been flying upside down, without realizing it!

His parachute brought him down safely, and he was unhurt. But the picture that brief dispatch gives one—a hostile night, a raging storm, a lone pilot flying blindly, so completely lost that he could not even tell that he was not right side up—that picture reflects Adventure, spelled with a capital.

Come, Come! Gentlemen! We Thought This Was Courtesy Week!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service, Writer

WASHINGTON—One of the things any administration most hates to admit is the existence of widespread unemployment. But sooner or later the opposition party insists on calling the fact to national attention and lately the Hoover administration has publicly recognized the present situation, spurred on by a speech from Senator Wagner of New York.

As usual, the fact stands out at once that no one knows how many persons are out of work because there is no machinery provided for finding out.

"Unemployment can only be measured accurately by a canvass of the unemployed and that is very expensive," explains an official of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "Such a canvass would cost several million dollars and this bureau, although authorized to compile figures, has less than $300,000 a year to spend."

Davis Estimates 3,000,000

Secretary of Labor Davis has estimated conservatively that 3,000,000 persons are jobless and unofficial estimates have run as high as 6,000,000. The only reasonable guess on the basis of available information is that the number runs somewhere between those two figures.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics makes the best stab, it can by compiling monthly figures showing the change in the number of workers employed in about 35,000 industrial establishments which employ more than 5,000 persons when business is good. The figures are furnished in reply to questionnaires. This monthly survey is supposed to cover most of the important industries and the theory is that it is fairly representative, but it is admitted that no one knows how close the results actually come to the real countrywide situation. It is supposed to be the best method short of actual canvass.

An index figure of 100 was taken for the 12 months of 1922, regarded as a year in which there was no unemployment problem.

Recent figures for manufacturing industries show that the high index figure for 1929 was 99.3 in September, that this dropped to 94.3 for November, 91.9 for December and 90.2 for January. Labor Department statisticians express doubt whether the February figure will show much change, but the American Federation of Labor's report showing an increase of from 20 per cent in union members to 22 per cent in February does not indicate the likelihood of any substantial improvement.

One way to guess at the number of unemployed is to fix the number of wage earners in 1926 at 40,000,000—the 1920 census showed an additional million or so—and apply the 10 per cent decrease in manufacturing employment shown by the bureau's index figures. The result is about 4,000,000. But that method is much too simple. Some lines of work have been harder hit than manufacturing; others considerably less. There is also a theory that about 1,000,000 persons are out of work at all times and these aren't covered by the index figures. The factor of seasonal unemployment should also be kept in mind.

They never hurry, being wise—
The clouds, the hills, the eternal seas.
Beneath the everlasting skies
They take their course unswervingly.
The ages come, the ages pass;
The thousand years are but a dream.

Twilight skies the old stars gleam.

Of the tides upon its shore,
Of age-long, dim philosophy—
The silence, as before,
Human haste, with tranquil eyes
Y gaze—and haste not, be wise.

Colorful Ensembles
In "Gold Diggers"

The most colorful and elaborate stage ensemble in the entire production of "Gold Diggers of Broadway" Warner Bros. 100% all-talking, singing, dancing natural color special, opening Wednesday at the Saenger Theatre, was filmed as the final act of production. It is a "show within a show."

Principals and chorus in this pretentious "gold diggers" number in the picture comprise many more than any other separate revue in the film. A complete orchestra furnishes the music in the theatre pit.

Many original songs written especially for the picture are introduced in "Gold Diggers of Broadway."

Nancy Welford, Conway Tearle,
Winnie Lightner, Ann Pennington,
Lillian Tashman, William Bakewell, Nick Lucas, Helen Foster, Albert Ganand Gertrude Short have the most outstanding roles. The picture was adapted from the David Belasco stage hit, "The Gold Diggers," written by Avery Hopwood.

Ken Maynard Comes
To Grand Wednesday

Lay—dees and gents!
"Step right up close and witness our free performance before we pass among you our famous Lizard Oil, the greatest healing preparation the world has ever known."

"It's guaranteed to cure boils, burns and bunions, rheumatism, skin disease including hair and fallen arches, snake bites and financial troubles."

"It makes the old young and the young rambunctious."

That was the ballyhoo of the old-time medicine man on his medicine van, parked on the corner lot, with its sputtering gas lights and its bauby banners.

One is almost inclined to go to such extremes in announcing "The Parade of the West," starring Ken Maynard, Universal all-talking sensation built around the old-time wild west show, which comes to the New Grand Wednesday for one day only.

In a way the picture depicts Maynard's real life as he was once a rope-twirling performer with a medicine show and a cowboy star with one of the original wild west shows. Every detail of these colorful old-time exhibitions was fresh in his memory when the picture was made.

"The Parade of the West" is replete with fresh thrills, new situations, new characters and is featured by the revival of the popular songs of the old west—sung by Maynard himself—such as "The Chisholm Trail," "Down in Union County," and "Sal's Got a Wooden Leg."

It's not the stereotyped "western."
It's something new and different—an angle never taken before in pictures.

BAKING SUCCESS

but tested the product of her labors from time to time, to insure their being done. Today, modern stoves mark a rare advancement from that first humble sun-warmed hearth. The woman who has not equipped her kitchen with a cook stove embodying the latest findings in temperature maintenance for her oven, faces a handicap as great as though she still carried water from the spring and lighted her home with tallow dipped candles. The saving in unspoiled bakings alone, not to mention the ruffled temper of the cook presiding within a short time more than offset additional cost involved.

"One of the oldest among professions, and one that is known to nearly every nation, regardless of stage of development or racial background, is baking. Archaeologists have not yet plumbed the unfathomable depths of the past, to such a degree that the crumbling dusts have not revealed baking utensils. In old New England, one of the social requisites of the housewife of the day was her baking standards. Today, baking has reached its zenith in the hands of the Germans. From pumpnickel to pretzels, the German baker reigns supreme."

Mrs. Thrig, whose baking prestige is recognized from coast to coast, will give practical demonstrations of her recipes in a lecture devoted exclu-

Jobe Is Indicted On Robbery Charge

Grand Jury Also Indicts
Major and Sapp In Abduction Plot.

HOT SPRINGS, March 18.—(P)—An indictment with charges of robbery were returned by a grand jury here today against H. B. Jobe of Pine Bluff, and Emory Major and T. L.
Sapp, both of Louisiana, alleged abductors and robbers of L. W. Quatlebaum, wealthy Pine Bluff banker and planter.

Jobe is held in custody here while the other two men Sapp and Major are held in Pine Bluff. Jobe was brought here last week from Pine Bluff where his arrest followed Major and Sapp's in Louisiana. Pine Bluff authorities refused to release Sapp and Major to Hot Springs officers.

The grand jury here acted upon the theory that the robbery of Quatlebaum occurred in this county. Jobe denied he was implicated in the abduction and robbery, although Sapp has confessed his part and has accused Jobe as the person who proposed the plot at his office in Shreveport, La.

The grand jury questioned Pine Bluff officers and Quatlebaum before returning the indictment. Bond was fixed at $2,500 for each of the men.

At the age of twenty he went to Hope and studied law in the office of the late Captain C. A. Bridewell.
He was admitted to the Bar in 1883 and soon became the partner of Captain Bridewell, under the firm name of Bridewell & McCollum. His merit and sterling integrity were quickly recognized and at the early age of twenty-two he was elected Mayor of Hope and served in that capacity for one term. He was a member of the Arkansas Legislature from Hempstead County for two terms and in 1890 he was elected prosecuting attorney for this circuit, which office he held for several years and in which he distinguished himself as an able, fearless and fair prosecutor. He became Judge of the Eighth Judicial Circuit in 1922 and held that office until his death.

During the world war Judge Mc-Collum served as County Chairman for the American Red Cross in which position he rendered able and patriotic service to his country.

An Excellent Citizen Judge McCollum was one of the best of men and a pure and righteous Judge. His quality was "To live justly, love mercy and walk humbly before his God." He was absolutely conscientious in the discharge of his duties as Judge and truly typified the blind goddess who held the scales of justice evenly balanced. He was always courteous and listened to the arguments of Counsel with close attention which made it a pleasure to appear before him and he held in the highest degree of respect, esteem and affection of the lawyers who practiced in his court. His rectitude was perfect and nothing but love of justice actuated his decisions. His was a gentle nature, a pure and up-right heart, a mind of lofty ideals and high purpose. His life was one of noble service and complete dedication to duty. The law to him was indeed a jealous mistress, who dominated his entire judicial work.

Therefore, be it resolved that in the death of Judge James H. Mc-Collum, we mourn the loss of a truly good man, a lovable and loyal friend,

PARNELL APPOINTS (Continued from page one)

Bar in regard to the death of our beloved brother James H. McCollum, are painfully and profoundly conscious of the fact that the Bar, the bench and the State have suffered a great loss. James H. McCollum was born in Hempstead County, Arkansas, January 9th, 1862. His parents were Ambrose Baird McCollum and Attila mira Wayne McCollum, natives of Alabama, who came to Arkansas in 1849. Their home was located eight miles Northeast of Hope and this farm was still in the possession of Judge McCollum at the time of his death. Here he was reared and received a common school education and later attended Ansley's Academy, established by the scholarly John A.
Ansley, a graduate of Erskine's College, South Carolina, at Arkansas near Prescott and there took the full academic course.

At the age of twenty he went to

Champion Must Pay
The end of the uphill climb, there is nowhere to go but down. That is what it comes to be a champion.

Hagen's soft breeches will hardly be stirring when the desperate battle to stay on top of the hill will begin. For some, it is going to be a bitter struggle. For men like Babe Ruth, Walter Hagen and Bill Tilden, who have been champions for years, the days are numbered.

To be brutal, it is decay. The champion feels the pangs of mortality last summer, when ailing legs and back laid the great man away for weeks. Walter Hagen, dilly-dallying with a bored masochist through the winter tournaments, has felt these twinges, too. He is no longer the Walter who could appear at the course in full dress, suit, early in the morning hours, without having been aches—and shoot a miraculous round.

Tilden, growing daily more irascible and strained as the heat of battle makes demands upon his physical assets that no longer can be paid, is another who is taking the slides downhill now. At the end of the summer, where will these three men be?

How They Have Conquered!
WHAT great moments they have had! The Hag, 15 years ago, winning his first tournament! Babe Ruth, baseball's heroic and temperamental figure for the last decade! Tilden, blazing his way to his first crown in 1920! But now others are clamoring for room at the top. The word is, "Keep moving!"

The Babe got away slowly last year and, despite sickness and injuries, struggled past his rivals in the final drive. Can he do it again, in 1926 years of age? He thinks he can. But the years between 25 and 40 are hard years for an athlete. The spindly legs that upheld the great Ruthian frame have begun to buckle under the strain. I believe Babe will be passed this year in the home run race for the second time since he started his record career of banging them over the wall in 1919. The second time—and the last.

Hagen's Confidence Waning
WALTER HAGEN'S entry in the British open this year depends upon how his game goes in Australia and the Orient, where he has been on tour with Joe Kirkwood. In the tournaments on the Pacific,

There seems no one around to defeat Mrs. Helen Willis Moody. Glena Collett couldn't lose to anyone but Joyce Wethered, the Briton, and Joyce says she has put away almost anything he goes after in the tennis field.

There are three stars, however, for whom this year may be the last at the hilltop. The Babe, Sir Walter, Big Bill—for these the downhill trek will be swift and sure.

Washington Hurdler Sets Goal At New Mark For the 120 Yards

SEATTLE, March 18.—(P)—If a certain ambition is achieved this spring, the ten-year-old world's 120-yard high hurdle record of 14.4 seconds will bow to a new mark.

Steve Anderson, University of Washington track luminary, and National A. A. U. and collegiate high and low hurdle champion, has set his heart on completing his school days this year with a record breaking performance.

He will make two special efforts to shatter the high hurdle mark in the Pacific Coast conference championships at Pullman, Wash., May 30 and 31, and at the national collegiate meet in Chicago next June.

Anderson has twice tied the world's record figures in the 120-yard event but in neither case did his coach, Hec Edmundson, apply for the mark as the hurdles over which the fleet-footed Husky ace traveled were not official. Edmundson reports the performance to the national collegiate association but made no effort to have them accepted as official.

The first time the Husky star tied the world's mark was in 1927, in his sophomore year at the Pacific coast conference meet in Missoula, Mont. He stepped the 120-yard high in 14.4 seconds to equal the accepted mark established by Earl Thompson of Dartmouth at Philadelphia in 1920.

Anderson turned the trick again last May when he ran the high sticks in a cold rain to win the coast conference championship in a race that found the slowest of all the watches—five of them—at 14.4. Two of the watches caught the race at 14.3. Some of the hurdles, however, were not standard.

The Washington ace won both the high and low hurdle events at the National Collegiate meet in Chicago and the National A. A. U. championships in Denver last summer.

CITY AUTO LICENSES NOW PAST DUE!

225 less city auto licenses have been purchased this year than last, altho the expiration date has passed.

All auto owners who have not bought city licenses by Saturday night of this week will be stopped by the police department to explain why they have not bought licenses. Anyone found without a license next week will be subject to a city fine.

The city has given sixty days service on auto licenses this year, and still a large percentage of cars in the city are without licenses.

Motor Trouble Halts Speed Trial

British Driver Expects To Resume Test Run Today

DATON BEACH, Fla., March 18.—(P)—A broken casing on the supercharger of his giant Silver Bullet racer, caused when two motors backfired Monday cut short a test run by Kaye Don, veteran British driver, here to make an assault upon the world's speed record of 231 miles an hour.

It repairs are made in time, and weather and beach conditions are favorable, Don expects to resume the trials Tuesday.

The heavy footed driver, who reached a speed of 198 miles an hour Saturday, had planned to put the machine through several fast trials Tuesday and then if he found conditions ideal, make an official attack upon the record.

Bringing his powerful, streamlined machine onto the ocean speedway about 3:30 p. m., an hour after low tide, Don started south down the course at a rapid gait, but before he reached the measured mile, motor trouble developed. When he reached the grand stand, at the south end of the mile, the motors stopped.

With the tide slowly flowing in over the course, mechanics worked quickly in an attempt to complete repairs in time to make another trial, before the beach became inundated. After several minutes work, the mechanics thought they had the trouble remedied and the car shot on down toward the south end of the course. It proceeded only a short distance, however, before the motors again stopped.

With mechanics unable to make the repairs before the tide covered the beach, the car was towed back to its garage.

Low tide Tuesday occurs at 4:26 p. m. but condition probably will be such that he will be able to get onto the course at least an hour before that time.

Football Rules Up for Discussion On Friday

NEW YORK, March 18.—Football rules for 1930 will be under discussion at the annual meeting of the rules committee at the annual meeting of the rules committee at the Sea View Golf Club Absecon N. J., on Friday, but no important changes from the 1929 code are expected.

The committee has been at work recodifying the rules and may have its task completed for the 1930 guide. An announcement of what happens at the meeting will not be made until March 24.

Big Ten Mile Record Orval Martin's Aim

LAFAYETTE, Ind., March 18.—(P)—Orval Martin, Purdue's long legged runner, hopes to close his college career this spring by setting a new Western conference record in the mile run, a mark he has approached for the past three years.

The record, 4:15.8, set by E. H. Fall of Oberlin, has stood since 1917. Martin clipped off the mile in 4:15.6 at the Penn Relays last year.

The Purdue stepper began this year where he left off last, winning the Big Ten mile and half-mile events. At Minneapolis he won both indoor distance runs. Last year he won the mile and half-mile outdoors and the mile indoors. In his sophomore year, 1928, he was first in the half-mile indoors and the mile outdoors.

Martin is captin of this year's Purdue team.

Travelers' 1930 Team May Be Slugging Group

HOT SPRINGS, March 18.—(P)—It begins to look as if Manager Jack Steele had gathered the slugging aggregation so badly needed last season by the Little Rock Travelers. Koster, right fielder, last season with Dallas has obtained seven hits in as many times at bat against the Minneapolis Millers.

Redfern, shortstop, Brooks, center-fielder, Rose left fielder, Conannon, keystoner, and McDaniel, last year's first baseman, also have done some fancy hitting. In fact, their hitting would have been good enough to beat Minneapolis in the two games, had Al Simmons not preferred training here to the Alligator state.

Sharkey Best of Heavy Boxers, Says Corbett

BOSTON, March 18.—Jack Sharkey, outstanding contender for the vacant heavyweight crown, could defeat any heavyweight in the world, in the opinion of James J. Corbett, former world's heavyweight champion.

"Gentleman Jim," who opened a stage engagement here said Monday Sharkey is a fast boxer and can punch and he "expects to see Sharkey on Tunney's old throne."

"If Sharkey elects to box Max Schmeling in their bout in June he should win on points," Corbett said.

Corbett also expressed the opinion he believed Jack Dempsey will stage a comeback and fight Carrera, the Italian heavyweight sensation.

"Carrera," he explained, "is a big, slow fellow and an ideal opponent for Jack. Dempsey is a great fighter and should lick the Italian in two rounds."

Best Student-Athlete to Win Fascist Prize

ROME, March 18.—(P)—The best scholar-athlete among Italian university youths will be awarded a prize of $500 a the end of the year, to be given by the directorate of the Fascist party.

Stipulations are that the winner must be an "old black shirt," that is to say, inscribed in the Fascist university groups for some time; he must pass a rigid final examination, and win a high "classification" in some sport.

Tom Heflin for First Time in 30 Years Is Facing Defeat in Alabama Election

Newspaper Writer Finds Klan Influence Almost Negligible and Fiery Senator Fighting to Stay in Public Life

EDITOR'S NOTE—This interesting summary of the present political situation was written by a member of the staff of NEA Service who spent several years in newspaper work in Alabama.

By ROBERT TALLEY
NEA Service Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 18.—After nearly 30 years in the two houses of Congress, Senator J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama is facing defeat for the first time and is fighting with his back to the wall to keep from being retired from public life.

This is a fair and impartial statement, made after a first-hand survey of conditions in the state, and is based largely on these points:

1. Heflin has been read out of the Democratic party in Alabama by the state executive committee and barred from the Democratic primary because he bolted the party to oppose Al Smith and support Hoover in 1928—and in Alabama the Democratic nomination has always been equivalent to election.

2. The Ku Klux Klan which four years ago dominated Alabama politics with a power sufficiently strong to elect a governor and a U. S. senator is now pretty much a thing of the past in this state. Its organization has fallen apart, its influence is negligible.

3. If Heflin runs as an independent at the general election in November as he now plans, he will face a serious technical obstacle in the fact that voters desiring to split the ticket for his benefit will have to mark the ballot for each individual candidate instead of making one mark under the picture of the party emblem and thus voting a straight ticket as it usually done in Alabama.

This means one mistake or duplication will invalidate the whole ballot, and in some counties there will be 50 or more names on the ballots.

Two Democratic Opponents

Qualified as regular Democratic candidates seeking the nomination in the primary on August 12 are John H. Bankhead of Birmingham, and Frederick I. Thompson of Mobile. Bankhead is a wealthy corporation attorney and a retired coal mine operator. Thompson is publisher of five Alabama newspapers and a former member of the United States Shipping Board.

The Republicans may or may not put out a candidate. If they do, his vote will be futile because Alabama is overwhelmingly Democratic and has always been so. The fact that Al Smith, admittedly crippled by Heflin's strong opposition, carried Alabama over Hoover only by a margin of 127,000 to 120,000 votes, is not an indication of Republican strength. Instead, it was an indication of Democratic dislike for Smith, fanned by Heflin.

Heflin Not Deserted

The 50,000 regular Democrats who temporarily abandoned their party to vote for Hoover did so because of their objection to Smith as a wet and a Catholic. Since Smith is not now a candidate, it is unlikely they will leave the fold again in very appreciable numbers, even to vote for Tom.

A Boasted Tradition

But "the straight Democratic Ticket" is a boasted tradition in Alabama, and has been ever since reconstruction days. The Republican party, in Alabama's eyes stands for political equality for the negro with negro office holders—and that is unthinkable in Alabama.

For this reason, although the negro population of Alabama is about half of the total, the negro vote is no factor. There just isn't any. Under the state law by which county officers test the qualifications of applicants for voting papers, the officials have such wide latitude that they can, if they desire, make the requirements impossible.

Heflin has been charging that "Smith, Raskob and the Roman Catholic wet crowd of New York" are flooding money into Alabama to beat him. Yet, his personal strength and some of the remnants of this dying bitterness may cause some Democrats to desert in his favor.

Heflin Seems Worried

Heflin's course seems to indicate he realizes the seriousness of his situation. When the Democratic state committee barred him, he came rushing down from Washington with a war club in his hand. The war club soon turned into an olive branch. He spoke as well attended meetings throughout Alabama and made numerous pleas to get his name on the Democratic ticket but to all these the state committee turned a deaf ear.

A suit to compel the committee to do this was filed but no action has yet been taken.

Thompson, the newspaper publisher, has merely stated, in announcing his candidacy against Bankhead for the Democratic nomination, that he doesn't propose "to see the nomination go by default." Thompson is an ancient foe of the Alabama Power Co. and strongly opposed to the klan.

Bankhead's Views

Bankhead has not yet announced a platform but he told this reporter that "the outstanding issue in this campaign will be whether Alabama shall remain Democratic."

"How about Senator Heflin's anti-Catholic issue?" he was asked.

"I have no sympathy or patience with any effort to proscribe any religion as a basis for office holding or as a political issue," he replied. "I think that religion has no place in politics."

"Three years ago I called upon Governor Graves to disband the klan as serving no good purpose. There is no need for any organization to fight the Catholics and negroes in Alabama. We have the negroes under control and the Catholics represent only two per cent of our total population."

Bankhead is 58, a Methodist, a Mason and a retired coal mine operator who sold his holdings three years ago for $250,000. Since then he has devoted all his time to law in Birmingham. Eight years ago, he admits—and this is always a political issue in Alabama—he was an attorney for the Alabama Power Company, on a retainer of $200 a year. In 1928, he stumped Alabama for Al Smith while Heflin was going up and down the line for Hoover.

Plans Aggressive Campaign

He is a son of the late Senator Bankhead, father of the good roads movement and a brother of Congressman W. B. Bankhead. He ran for the senate four years ago and was defeated by Hugo Black, who received the klan support.

Bankhead is planning an aggressive campaign. He plans to speak in every Alabama county, tearing into Heflin's record and urging the voters to retire the fiery "Cotton Tom" on the ground that "he is a disgrace to Alabama in the eyes of the nation."

Both Heflin and Bankhead are prohibitionists, which after all, means nothing in Alabama, as the people here who really want liquor get all they want.

Murder Backstairs

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DORIS MATTHEWS, a girl in a blue dress, is seen in a summerhouse on the Berkeley estate by a blow with a heavy perfume flask, and the body, still unrecognizable, was found in the lake where it is found Saturday morning by DETECTIVE BONNIE DUNDEE, house guest who summons CAPTAIN STRAWN.

MEMBERS OF HOUSEHOLD (all under suspicion): Mrs. and Mrs. George Berkeley, who have quarreled over Clorinda's engagement to REYNOLD CROSBY, close friend of the general secretary, MRS. LAMBERT, GIGI BERKELEY, who sprinkled all persons in drawing room Friday night with perfume from flask presented by Crosby to Mrs. Berkeley and later used as murder weapon; DICK BERKELEY, who, after having been missing all night, turns up white his mother in accusing EUGENE ARNOLD, chauffeur, of having murdered Dick and Doris; WICKETT, butler, formerly in employ of both Mrs. Berkeley and Crosby.

Mrs. Berkeley contends she did not see or speak to Doris after 7:15 but is forced to admit she called Doris over balcony about 11:15 from library and told her to visit her mistress in bedroom with Doris was not there. Confronted with the roused print of Doris's mouth on the bathroom dressing-table mirror, Mrs. Berkeley admits she slipped the note while dressing for dinner for having said she used "ton much perfume" device when took place in bathroom arena Doris was not there when she (Mrs. Berkeley) came up in her about 11:15 but confesses when told her daughter Clorinda's scent was found tied about the murdered girl's legs.

"Sitting on the arm of his chair isn't sprawling," Gigi corrected her sister cheerfully.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

It was Bonnie Dundee who mixed a dose of aromatic spirits of ammonia and George Berkeley who, staggering a little under her weight, carried the fainting woman to her unmade bed.

"Looks like a confession coming on, don't it?" Captain Strawn whispered as Dundee was hurrying past him to the bed.

But when Mrs. Berkeley opened her eyes and was jerked back to realization by the sight of Captain Strawn bending expectantly over her, she did nothing more illuminating than to scream, then close her eyes again, rolling her head distractedly on the matted pillows.

They left her in her husband's charge shortly, but in the hall Strawn beckoned to a detective doing patrol duty and stationed him in the littleoyer between sitting room and bedroom, with instructions to listen at the not quite closed door leading into the bedroom.

As Dundee and Strawn were walking down the broad stairs the latter whispered excitedly: "Pretty good case against her, eh? Wickett took the flask of perfume Crosby had given her to her room between 10 and 11. She says herself she told him to take it up, and I'd bet my shield he did. Perfume gone. Gigi in struggle in the bathroom. And the old Tartar admits she slapped the girl around seven o'clock. Tried to lie about ordering the girl to go to her room and wait till she came up. Thought her husband would back her up, and nobody else would know. But George Berkeley's a white man, and no fool, either. Wouldn't let her get away with it, would he?" and Strawn checked.

They had almost reached the last step, and Dundee halted before answering in a low voice:

"There's something—a lot—that hasn't come out yet, Chief. Did you catch that about the other bottle of perfume? I'd give a good deal to know the truth about Doris's 'impudence'—exactly what she said to make Mrs. Berkeley snap her. As it is now, I can't see Mrs. Berkeley chasing the girl out of the house, brandishing the flask of Fleur d' amour, till she caught up with her in the summerhouse, and then crocking the poor thing over the head with it, no matter how impudent Doris had been or how serious their quarrel was, if she was there when Mrs. Berkeley went up for the night."

"HUN!?" Strawn snorted. "You don't doubt for a minute that she was there, do you? You proved that yourself, with the mouth-print on the mirror. The struggle, too. And you saw what a spitfire the old dame is! Got flats like sledge hammers. My chest'll be sore for a week. No telling what a woman like that will do when she loses her temper. Not only was she sore at the girl for 'sassing' her, but she had it in for her plenty about Dick."

"Yes, I know," Dundee frowned. "But—Well, what next? Clorinda?"

"Sure! If she gives us what sounds like a straight story as to how that scarf got into the summerhouse, I, for one, am pretty near ready to get out the bracelets for the old lady. Guess I ought to have checked up on the shoes she was wearing last night, to see if there was any of that perfume on the soles, but I didn't want to show my hand too soon. There'll be time for that later, when she's out of the way. The shoes are safe, all right. She can't dispose of them or some them in benzoin without being caught at it."

They found the two girls, Mrs. Lambert and Crosby lingering at the breakfast table, though no one was eating. Lounging in the arched opening between drawing room and dining room was Detective Payno.

"Oh, hello, Bonnie Dundee!" Gigi sang out. "Mr. Crosby has been telling us the most gorgeous story about a hunting trip in Africa. He marble staircase, with a silver tray laden with letters.

"Just a minute, Wickett!" Captain Strawn barked him. "Mrs. Berkeley says that she gave you that flask of French perfume to take to her rooms last night. That right?"

"Yes, sir. I was just returning from the library, after showing Mr. Dundee to the telephone there, when Mrs. Berkeley called to me and gave me the flask. I took it upstairs immediately, sir."

"And where did you put it?"

"On Mrs. Berkeley's bathroom dressing-table, sir."

"And what time was this?"

"I can't say exactly, sir, but I believe it was between 10 and half-past."

After dismissing the butler, Strawn strode into the library.

"Will you be seated?" Clorinda asked coldly. Then added sharply: "Don't sprawl all over Captain—ah—Strawn, Gigi."

"Sitting on the arm of his chair isn't sprawling," Gigi corrected her sister cheerfully. "I want to be where I can choke him if he asks questions he shouldn't. Like this!" and she leaned over and encircled the austere detective's big neck with her little brown hands, then laid her flushed cheek against his and laughed wickedly. "You know, using only 15 doses have its advantages. Think of all the gorgeous men I can bug before I'm 16 and grown-up, if I work fast."

"Shut up, Pest!" Captain Strawn roared, but Dundee saw that he was vastly pleased, so pleased that he was not suspicious—as was his young subordinate—of the child's real motives. "Now, Miss Clorinda, I've got a good many questions to ask you, and I advise you to answer them fully and truthfully, or—"

"DON'T you have to tell her, and I warn you that anything you say may be used against you?" Gigi interrupted, bouncing on the chair-arm with excitement.

"Your sister is not under arrest yet," Captain Strawn reminded her, "so I don't have to warn her against incriminating herself."

"But Gigi has warned her, and—the haughty Miss Berkeley is on her guard!" Dundee told himself, sending a narrowed, newly respectful glance at the child, who returned it with wide-eyed innocence.

"Miss Clorinda, when did you last see Doris Matthews?" Captain Strawn began, and Dundee, seated in a big chair with conveniently broad, flat arms, waited with pencil poised over his pad of notepaper to take down the answers just before 11 o'clock, I found her in my room when I went upstairs last night. She was laying out my night things, and waited to—to help me undress."

But Strawn was not yet ready to trap her in a lie. "How did she seem, Miss Clorinda? Unhappy? Worried about anything?"

"Not at all! In fact, she was in an unusually happy mood. She confided to me that she was going out to meet her fiancé, Arnold. The chauffeur, you know."

"But Doris also told you, didn't she, that your brother had made her promise to meet him last night when the family was in bed?"

The magnificent police was broken at last. Clorinda Berkeley gasped, started to rise, then sank back against the couch, her eyes closing so that the fan-like fringe of her long lashes made a startling contrast with the sudden pallor of her cheeks.

Transient Hangs Self Near Hazen

Despondent Stranger Believed Former Resident of Denver

HAZEN, March 18.—Frank Vakau, 41, believed to have been a former resident of Denver, Col., who had been at Hazen two weeks, committed suicide Sunday by hanging himself from a small tree. The body was found by searchers hanging from the tree on the banks of Little LaGrue creek, three miles south of Hazen.

Vakau came here about two weeks ago from Booneville or Hot Springs. He had been staying at the home of Mrs. Modest, near Hazen. Vakau left the house Sunday morning and when he failed to return, a search was started.

Coroner J. H. Rounsavall held an inquest and returned a verdict of suicide. About $200 was found on the body and $500 had been deposited by Vakau in a bank here, having been transferred from a Booneville bank in cashiers' checks. No relatives of the man are known here but officers have notified officials in Denver.

Davis Will Race For Senate Seat

Secretary of Labor To Run Against Grundy In Penn.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 18.—(AP)—Secretary of Labor James J. Davis Sunday announced his candidacy for the republican nomination as United States senator from Pennsylvania.

The secretary will bid for the nomination at the primaries May 20, in opposition to Joseph R. Grundy, appointed senator from Pennsylvania by Governor John S. Fisher on the senate's refusal to seat William S. Vare. Davis will enter the race aligned with Francis Sprunk Brown, of Philadelphia, former state attorney-general, who has the endorsement of Vare, and the backing of the Philadelphia republican organization. Grundy long a power in Pennsylvania republican politics, will, if he enters the race as fully expected, be supported by the Mellon-Fisher combination in the state.

Menu For the Family

THERE'S nothing quite like the taste of fresh maple syrup. The "first run," which usually is considered the lightest colored and most delicately flavored, is delicious served plain with warm biscuits, pancakes or waffles. Dips, sweetened with real maple syrup have a flavor that can't be imitated.

The housewife who plans for a small family will find that a full gallon of syrup may spoil before she can use it up. The syrup not wanted for immediate use in the spring can be canned in pint jars to be used later as wanted. Return syrup to the boiling point, pour into sterilized jars and seal. Wrap each glass jar in a damp towel to completely cover the jar—bottom and sides. This prevents the jar from breaking when the boiling syrup is poured into it. Fill jar perfectly full and seal at once.

Since maple syrup is usually less expensive bought by the gallon than in smaller quantities, and since there are so many ways to use it for "special" occasions, a gallon of maple syrup is a good investment.

Maple gelatine is a simple dessert that even an invalid or small child can enjoy.

Maple mousse, maple parfait and maple frozen custard are amazingly good and easy to make. Maple syrup cake and cookies are ideal for spring-time refreshments.

Maple Gelatine

One and one-half tablespoons granulated gelatine, 4 tablespoons cold water, 3-4 cup hot milk, 3-4 cup maple syrup, 2 eggs (whites), few grains salt. Soften gelatine in cold water for five minutes. Add scalding

Woman Will Be Added Sing Sing's Population

OSSEINTING, N. Y., March 18.—(AP)—To Sing Sing's prison population of 2,300 hitherto exclusively male, a lone woman will be added July. But she will not wear a number for she will be an employee, not a prisoner. Her job will be to see that women visitors amuggle in no weapons and break no other rules. Among her tasks will be to keep out women posing as wives of the prisoners and to admit the real wives.

The money for the new position was provided in the new state budget. Warden Lewis E. Laws has not yet selected a woman for the job.
